Synopsis

THE AUTHOR I am a divorced male US MD psychiatrist, who lived, or tried to live, in Mexico

PART OF ONE SCENE TWO MEXICAN YOUNG WOMEN: ...I kept my eyes on fourteen-year-old Peti, should I need to duck her thrown rock. And worse, I got a feeling that Peti was going to rush up and strike me repeatedly with the rock in her hand. Questions in my mind: Was Peti bluffing? Was this a fun and harmless game? Her sister Ambrosia's previous threat to report my marijuana use to Policewoman Itzel turned out to be a tease: a bluff. But tonight, Peti's softball-sized rock looked real, and likely to strike me when thrown by Peti from only five feet away. In response, I retreated for home on my bicycle. I didn't get home free. While I bicycled away, Peti threw the rock and hit my bike. I U-turned on my bike to counterattack my beloved enemy Peti, who loved to hate me. Fifteen-year-old Ambrosia - Peti's sister - responded to my U-turn counterattack by grabbing the broom from her three-wheeled cargo bike. Ambrosia charged me on foot, head-on. I U-turned to evade Ambrosia's broom. While gaining speed biking away, Ambrosia sprinted after me and hit me in the back with the broom. I retreated twenty-five feet via bicycle; and I made a U-turn to counterattack. I planned to U-turn earlier this time to avoid again being broomed by Ambrosia. I miscalculated. Ambrosia sprinted and hit me on the back with her broom, while she yelled ferocious threats. I biked off with my tail between my legs. Or was it with a broom between my legs?

PART OF ANOTHER SCENE I was showing my latest photos to fifteen-year-old Lupe. She grabbed the photos that she wanted and stuck them in her purse. When I tried to get them back, she repeatedly swung her purse, which hit me in the head like a sledgehammer; but I was half-German and very hardheaded. I closed in and wrestled her purse away from her, while she scratched, punched, and kicked me. I ignored the pain while retrieving my photos from her purse, when I noticed that Lupe had a rock in her purse. No wonder my head hurt! In a separate affair that evening, police comandante Bernardo and policewoman Itzel chased me | Bernardo and Itzel handcuffed me to the police pickup's propane tank and drove me through the center of town to deliver me to my hotel. The next day, people noticed my bruises and scratches; and they thought that I had fought the police. I didn't deny that I fought the police, because it sounded better than the truth: "I got the scratches and bruises from fifteen-year-old Lupe. You see..."
